ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A camera is provided for taking a combined picture by combining an optically-input image with an electronically-downloaded image. The composition of the combined picture is controlled both by adjusting the direction of pointing of the camera to control the content of the optically-input image and by electronically controlling the positioning and/or size of the downloaded image.